

Pacific Union College

Major in English—B.A.

OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION

General Areas of Service: Graduates from this program work as writers, editors, teachers, public relations personnel, librarians, business persons, and copywriters. Openings for teachers are expected to continue increasing for the foreseeable future.

Graduate and Professional Schools: Graduates from this program who wish to teach at the college level attend M.A. and Ph.D. programs in English graduate schools. Law schools, medical schools, and library schools also look favorably upon English majors. For those interested in elementary and secondary teaching in California, a fifth year is required for a full credential. The fifth year may or may not be at the graduate level.

Denominational Opportunities: Projected needs for English teachers are among the highest of all subject areas.

Job Outlook: High school and second-language teaching opportunities are plentiful. Job opportunities in public relations, technical writing, and editing are available but more competitive. Combining English with other majors is also a good way to gain a competitive advantage in other fields.
