Occupational Information

What can I do with this major?

College graduates with an emphasis in finance may choose among several areas including the following:

- 1) A career with financial institutions such as banks, savings and loan organizations, credit unions, or personal finance companies.
- 2) Career in the investments industry, including stock brokerage firms, investment banking firms, investment companies, etc.
- 3) A career in personal financial planning, real estate, or insurance.
- 4) An internship or management training program in the area of financial management of corporations and nonprofit institutions
- 5) Graduate schools of business, law, medicine, dentistry, or a related field.

Additional Education Required?

A bachelor's degree is required for most entry-level finance positions. Further education (MBA and/or doctorate) will enhance one's competitive position in larger firms. To reach the highest ranks in college and university environments, a doctorate is essential.

Job Outlook

The field of finance is broad and open for well-prepared graduates. While finance majors have a variety of career opportunities, students with a good accounting foundation tend to follow a faster career path.

* Courses used to fulfill requirements in these sections may not also fulfill requirements in another emphasis or business program.
