Student Learning Outcomes

Students can:

- Critically analyze the major themes and issues in the Bible in light of its cultural, literary, and historical contexts.
- Explain the basic Christian doctrines and distinctive Seventh-day Adventist beliefs in light of biblical and historical interpretation.
- Apply spiritual, ethical, and philosophical teachings in Scripture and Christian tradition to a contemporary world.

Occupational Information

What can I do with this major?

This major is designed primarily for those who wish to obtain a broad background in the study of religion but who are planning careers in other professions, such as medicine, education, law, or student personnel services. In addition to providing a broad-based undergraduate education, the religion major is intended to assist in the preparation of lay persons who can participate more fully in the life of the church.

Additional Education Required?

It is strongly recommended that those electing to graduate with this major combine it with a another major, minor, or professional program (such as pre-med, pre-dent, pre-law, education, etc). Prospective teachers must obtain teaching credentials.

Job Outlook

If one combines the religion major with either another major or a pre-professional program, or continues into graduate school, there are a wide range of employment prospects. For example, there are a number of openings in teaching on the secondary level if one combines this major with another and completes the teacher credentialing process. And occasionally there are openings for a Bible worker.
