Health Sciences, A.S. and B.S.

Pacific Union College offers an A.S. and B.S. degree with a major in Health Sciences. These majors can be taken in conjunction with the pre-radiation sciences requirements. For more information, see page NHSC-06 or NHSC-07, or contact the Health Sciences advisor in the Nursing and Health Sciences Department.
Occupational Information

General Areas of Service

The medical radiographer, or radiologic technologist, is responsible for the accurate demonstration of body structures, on a radiograph or other image receptor. The technologist determines proper exposure factors, manipulates medical imaging equipment, evaluates the radiographic image for quality, and provides for patient protection and comfort. The medical radiographer frequently assists the physician team member in specialized procedures. These often require the administration of chemical mixtures to the patient for enhanced viewing of the function of body systems.

Professional Training

The B.S. degree program in radiation science is a post-professional degree available for students wishing to continue studies beyond the A.S. degree in medical radiography. The A.S. program in medical radiography prepares the student to take the certification examinations necessary to become a radiologic technologist, and the B.S. degree program in radiation science emphasizes more advanced areas of radiologic technology. If a student intends to proceed to a B.S. degree, it is recommended that two years be spent at PUC to complete all the general education requirements for this degree before going to LLU for professional training to complete the A.S. and B.S. degrees.

Job Outlook

Favorable opportunities for both full and part-time work are anticipated through the 2000's.

Earnings

The starting average wage scale is approximately $40,000 - $60,000.
