Occupational Information

What can I do with this major?

Strategic communication specialists are needed in every industry, from healthcare and education to media and nonprofit organizations. Increasingly, businesses are combining their public relations and marketing departments to provide a more unified approach to their promotional strategies. Our graduates have entered varying fields including law, medicine, journalism, marketing, and education.

Additional Education Required?

The degree is an entry-level one that does not require additional training to be successful in the field. However, many graduates have entered graduate programs in pre-professional areas, business, and writing, depending on their career goals and interests.

Public Sector vs. Denominational

Opportunities are available in both the public sector an denominational employment. Employers seek graduates with communication degrees for positions such as writers, editors, communication directors, and marketing executives.

Job Outlook

The outlook is excellent in the industry, as businesses seek to better manage their internal/external communication, enhance and build their reputation, and create meaningful relationships with their audiences.
