EDUC 297: Directed Study for EDUC 101: Introduction to Teaching

This course is intended to give a general overview of the teaching profession to help you decide if teaching is right for you and you for teaching. You will learn about the teaching profession, educational philosophies, some history of education in America, current issues in American education, and ways in which public and Seventh-day Adventist education structures are similar and different. In addition, information regarding credential requirements and program admission are presented and explained. This online course is available only to MAT candidates. Concurrent enrollment in EDUC 297: Directed Study for EDUC 101L Classroom Observations is required. 2 credits

EDIC 297: Directed Study for EDUC 101L: Classroom Observations

This course is a 25-hour field experience that provides practical insight into classroom teaching for the student who is considering entering the teaching profession. The experience involves extensive observation of teachers in both the classroom and on video with the purpose of giving you opportunities to see teachers in action. Candidate must have access to K-12 classrooms for observation. This online course is available only to MAT candidates. Concurrent enrollment in EDUC 297: Directed Study for EDUC 101 Introduction to Teaching is required. 1 credit

DETAILS

- Register for classes at www/puc.edu/summer-teacher
- Must enroll in EDUC 297: Directed Study for EDUC 101: Introduction to Education
- Must enroll in EDUC 297: Directed Study for /educ 101L Classroom Observations
- Questions? Contact Instructor Tom Lee at tdlee@puc.edu