THE JOURNEYS WE TAKE | Pam Sadler

The year is 1962. The alarm goes off at 3:50 a.m. and Brooke crawls out of bed, pulls on his clothes, and heads out the door to work. He works as a groundskeeper at Pacific Union College and rises each morning before dawn to work four hours before classes begin. His wife, Pat, pregnant with their first child, is finishing a degree in nursing.

The year is now 2005. Brooke, '62, and Pat, '62, Sadler are sitting in the pews of the PUC Church. The daughter they adopted from Pakistan as a baby sits next to them. Today she is serving as a vice president at their alma mater.

Forty-three years ago, who knew that degrees from PUC would take Brooke and Pat to serve as missionaries to Asia? Who knew that the friendships they developed here on Howell Mountain would be lifelong? Who knew that their daughter would one day agree to President Osborn's invitation to serve at their college? More than four decades ago, PUC invested in Brooke and Pat. Now they and I, their daughter, are glad to be investing back in PUC.

As the new kid on the block, I've quickly come to appreciate PUC's rich heritage. Howell Mountain is a gorgeous place to live, and I've even learned to enjoy the view of Newton Hall out of my office window. But what I've really come to appreciate are the alumni and friends who are giving back to PUC and to the world through their financial and prayerful support, through entrusting PUC with their children, or through their trained-for professions.

Alumni like Ed James, who flew hundreds of thousands of miles as a captain on United Airlines and safely delivered countless families and individuals to their destinations.

Alumni like J. Russell and Bonita Nelson, who served as president and first lady of Arizona State University, investing in the education of another generation of youth.

Alumni like Lynn Waihaee, who made children's literacy her passion and founded Read to Me International.

Students like Jose Torres. Karen Ong. Peter Adeogun.

In this issue of ViewPoint, we pay tribute to the alumni and friends of PUC who are investing in the potential of today's students—people who recognize that investments in Adventist education pay lifelong dividends.

People invested in you during your days at PUC, and people are investing in students on the hill this year—perhaps your son or daughter. To them and to you we say thank you for caring so deeply about our young people.

As the journey of our lives progresses and the years roll on, I can't wait to see the return on your investment!

Pam is Vice President for Advancement at Pacific Union College

Finding Hope in Community

by Julie Z. Lee

The way her family remembers it, Hilary Blount was in high school when she first mentioned a career in nursing. But the compassion required for such a field was evident throughout her life.

“She was the one for the underdog, the one to stop and pick up a bird on the side of the road with a broken wing,” says Lee Blount, her stepmother. “Her caring spirit showed when she was young, and it intensified through life.”

When Hilary did become a nurse, after graduating from Pacific Union College’s nursing program in 2000, she embodied her role as caretaker, leaving encouraging notes on patients’ pillows and taking time to sit with them as friends. Patients began to request Hilary’s care, and it was apparent that, for her, nursing was not just a job but a calling. “Hilary had a servant’s heart. And her patients knew that,” says Lee. “She was quick to think of others first ... Her spirit was just sweet, upbeat. She tried to bolster anyone around her who might be down.”

In July of 2005, when the family lost Hilary in a tragic car accident, it was the very memory of her exuberance that held them together and bolstered their own spirits—so much so that Lee and Gary, Hilary’s father, decided to start a nursing scholarship in remembrance of her vibrant compassion.

When word got out about a fund in Hilary’s name, Gary’s co-workers at United Hospital in St. Paul, Minnesota, where he is lead psychiatrist of the adolescent psychiatric unit, immediately responded. Together, friends contributed over $2,000 to the fund.

In September, the Blounts called Doug Ermshar, who works in the financial department, at PUC, and asked to establish the Hilary Blount R.N. Award. The gift aims to foster pride in the profession of nursing and promote excellence in the practice. The recipient needs to demonstrate enthusiasm, solid clinical skills, and most importantly, the personal touch that patients had grown to love about their daughter, Hilary.

“Hilary was just full of joy,” remembers Lee. “And when people were around her, she just radiated an enthusiasm for life that was unusual, but at the same time she was filled with compassion. And that’s what we were looking for in the award recipient.”

Within seconds, Doug told them he knew of just the person.

When Jennie Oldenkamp tells her story, her low voice alternates between exclamations and thoughtful pauses, punctuated by occasional pop jargon (Rock on!). Energy constantly percolates below the surface of conversation, and at times she explodes with the memory of a forgotten detail. Yet despite her enthusiastic tangents, Jennie’s narrative is focused and unwavering. She is compelling because she is unflinchingly candid. And she is telling how she got to PUC—a journey she believes began at the age of ten.

Jennie’s first interaction with Seventh-day Adventists was over 20 years ago in Tillamook, Oregon. Her older brother had been diagnosed with dyslexia, and her mother sent him to the local private school, Tillamook Adventist, in hopes that it would help his development. Her brother became part of the Adventist community and, even though Jennie did not attend the school, they also reached out to her with open arms. Soon Jennie, her brother, and her younger sister joined Pathfinders and spent the next few years earning badges, going on campouts, and participating in youth retreats.

The activities were costly; Jennie’s father didn’t make much money as a dairy farmer—she says they were “dirt poor.” But church members always made sure that the Oldenkamp kids could participate. “It wasn’t like charity. It was like a scholarship,” says Jennie, whose family was Nazarene. “We didn’t look at it as if we were poor white trash. It was somebody wanting to help us.”

What Jennie didn’t know then was that the embrace of the Adventist community would follow her for the rest of her life. It would be her saving grace.

After a brief stint at Tillamook Adventist School in junior high, Jennie went on to public high school and graduated. Then her life started to fall apart. At age 24, Jennie got pregnant. She married the father and shortly after giving birth, became pregnant with a second daughter. It wasn’t long before the young couple fell into distress. Jennie’s husband was more interested in drinking with buddies than in supporting a family. Jennie’s own string of waitressing jobs did little to help their financial situation.

Three years after getting married, Jennie ran into an old friend who worked at the Adventist hospital, Tillamook County General. Her friend mentioned that the hospital needed a phlebotomist, and Jennie agreed to apply. Though she was without formal training, she had once spent nearly a year drawing blood for a doctor’s office. She was quickly hired. Many on the staff remembered Jennie from Pathfinders, and her first day was like a homecoming. “I felt really good about working at the Adventist hospital because they were all the same faces, the familiar people from my childhood. They were so glad to see me,” says Jennie. The comfort of friends made her work a respite from troubles at home, and she immersed herself in her new responsibilities.

But a month and a half after starting her new job, Jennie confronted another problem—one she had tried to ignore for months. “I had this big growth on the side of my neck, under the skin. And if I turned my head the right way you could see it was golf ball sized,” she says. She showed it to a nurse on staff and was immediately taken to a doctor. The visit led to a cat scan, an ultrasound, and a biopsy. These were tests that she could never have afforded since she did not have health insurance, but her friendships at the hospital ensured her care. Everyone donated their time and expertise.

A week later, one of the doctors stopped her in the halls of the hospital. He confirmed her appointment for the next day and said he had her test results.

“Well, do I have cancer?” asked Jennie, point blank.

“Yes, you do,” he answered.

Jennie had thyroid cancer. “Here I am a mom. My baby is less than a year old. My other baby is less than three. My husband is irresponsible. And I was scared because I was afraid that if I died my children would not remember their mom. And that’s horrible. That was the biggest fear I ever had in my entire life,” says Jennie.

Two weeks later, Jennie underwent surgery to remove her lymph glands and thyroids. The hospital donated over $41,000 of service. The rest of her bill was paid for by government grants.

While she realizes it’s a cliché, she says her bout with cancer became a turning point in her life. Once a pessimistic, self-loathing individual, Jennie made a conscious decision to overhaul and upgrade her life.

Over the next three years, Jennie began attending the Nazarene Church, divorced her husband, and decided to study nursing, a childhood dream. She felt her tumultuous past had prepared her for the role. “I feel it takes a certain kind of person to be able to step into somebody else’s hell. I think I can handle that weight,” says Jennie. “I embrace that role. It’s a skill that God has given me—to be able to stand up with somebody and help them fight their battle.”

But Tillamook had little to offer Jennie. There was only one nursing program in town, and it wasn’t the right fit. Then, once again, Jennie bumped into an Adventist friend, Amanda Weiderman, who happened to be a nurse. Amanda told Jennie about the nursing program at PUC, but Jennie didn’t want to move to California and dismissed the idea. Amanda was persistent; when they saw each other again eight months later, she again brought up PUC.

At Amanda’s insistence, Jennie called the college and spoke with Suzie Ermshar, assistant director of Enrollment Services. Suzie told her that new nursing students were accepted every three months. The school also offered plenty of financial aid and scholarships, family housing, daycare on campus, and an Adventist elementary school next door. It sounded too good to be true, but at Suzie’s insistence, Jennie made her way to Angwin in December of 2004. As she met with the nursing department and toured the campus, her doubts faded. “She was so ecstatic,” says Suzie. “She saw there were possibilities.”

A month later, Jennie passed her entrance exams and officially enrolled at PUC for the 2005 fall quarter. She didn’t know how she would afford or manage college as a single parent, but any fear she had was subdued by an overwhelming sense of reassurance.

She needn’t have worried. After all, everything else had worked out so far. The school had placed Jennie’s family in an apartment. Neighbors and teachers had donated furniture. PUC Elementary had given her an excellent financial aid package so that Bailey, her oldest daughter, could attend a Christian school. The campus daycare, Discoveryland, had a place for four-year-old Nina. Even bags of groceries came to her door, provided at just the right moment by a neighbor with divine timing.

But on a crisp November day, just weeks into her first quarter, Jennie was filled with doubt and uncertainty. How was she going to pay for her nursing textbooks for the next two quarters? That afternoon, after praying with a friend, she trekked across campus to talk with Suzie, who had become her confidante. When she heard Jennie’s concerns, Suzie promised to keep her eyes out for financial aid.

“Jennie had no sooner walked out of my office than a woman from Calistoga walked in. She comes every year, and she brought an application for the Soroptimist Club scholarship,” says Suzie. “So immediately I called Jennie at home and left her a message. I said, ‘Jennie, you’re not going to believe this, but just after you walked out the door, this scholarship came in, and it’s perfect for you!’”

The Soroptimist Women’s Opportunity Award grants money to women who are working to improve their lives through education or skills training. The women must be the primary source of financial support for their family, and the money can be used to offset any expenses related to their studies.

As soon as Jennie heard the message, she returned to Suzie’s office to pick up the application. But it wasn’t the only answer to prayer in the works. Around the same time, Suzie’s husband, Doug, had been working out the details of the Hilary Blount R.N. Award.

Two weeks later, Jennie received a call at home. Again, it was Suzie. “She was like, ‘Jennie, I have a scholarship for you.’ And I said, ‘I know, I haven’t filled out the paperwork,’” remembers Jennie, who had assumed Suzie was referring to the Soroptimist application. “And she said, ‘No, I have a scholarship for you.’ She started to tell me the story.”

At Doug’s suggestion, the Blounts had agreed to make Jennie the first recipient of the Hilary Blount Award. It would be presented to her in two days, at a special awards luncheon.

On November 11, Jennie found herself addressing the college’s administration, invited guests, and Hilary’s parents. “The Blounts are here because of parental love for their daughter. And I am here because of my love for my daughters. But we are all here in this room together because of our Heavenly Father’s love for each one of us,” she said in a speech.

“It was so touching. I didn’t think any of us could get through the lunch,” remembers Lee. “Jennie was in tears, we were in tears. We felt that Hilary would be thrilled that Jennie is the one who got helped.”

It wasn’t only Jennie who was helped. The day was significant for the Blounts in their own healing process. “The scholarship has helped take some of the pain away. And seeing who was the recipient of the award and watching how much it meant to Jennie gave us comfort, knowing that the Lord was working through that tragedy to help someone else. And that did bring us a good deal of comfort,” says Lee.

Then, the Calistoga Soroptimist Club named Jennie the recipient of their annual award just a few weeks later.

“No one can look at her and her girls and what has happened, and deny that God is working in their lives,” says Suzie.

Lee and Gary Blount, Jennie, and Mike Inserra

Today Jennie is halfway through her second quarter at PUC. Having just survived her midterms, she is fighting a bug she caught from her daughter. But life goes on. On Monday morning she’ll start her usual weekday schedule: get up at 5:00, read her morning devotional, shower and make lunches for the girls. By 6:30 the girls will wake up, get dressed and eat breakfast. At 7:45, Jennie will walk Bailey to her class before dropping Nina off at daycare. Then it’s off to classes for Jennie. If the kids are sick, she’ll have to think of an alternate plan that doesn’t interfere with her class schedule.

She admits that it’s hard, but it’s part of a plan greater than her own imagination. Events like receiving the Hilary Blount Award remind her of this every day. After all, in the grand scheme of college expenses, the award is a dip in the deep tuition bucket. But it’s more than money. It’s more than books and food on the table. To Jennie, it’s evidence of God’s impeccable timing and guidance in her life.

“Symbolically, it’s God saying ‘Jennie just trust me, I’ve brought you this far and I won’t let you down,’” says Jennie, who is studying to be baptized in a couple of months. “I might stumble a couple more times, but He is so right there saying, ‘I love you, I love you.’”

At this, her voice lowers to a whisper, choking back tears. Then, in typical Jennie-fashion, she breaks out in glee.

“Dude, I’m becoming a Jesus freak!” she shouts. “It’s so great!”

PETER YINKA ADEOGUN

Aviation, Business Administration

Peter’s been at college for a long time—since birth, in fact. His parents teach at the University of Eastern Africa, Baraton, in Kenya, where his mother is a professor of English and his father is a professor of industrial engineering. But their positions aren’t exactly lucrative; “I don’t think my father has received a salary check since I was in fifth grade,” says Peter. So Peter’s own bid for a college education has included plenty of hard work. But between classes and working 20 hours per week at the airport and plant services, this Nigerian-born business and aviation major still keeps up with his other passion—world affairs—by voracious reading made affordable by the Internet. It’s a bond he and his father share, with the BBC news site key to keeping up with of the African political scene.

Now, with his twin brothers, Tade and Wade, at PUC and a fourth brother in college elsewhere in the US, financing his dream of ultimately becoming a mission pilot has become a particular challenge for Peter. The $30,000-40,000 needed beyond general tuition for flight training doesn’t just fall from the sky. Fortunately, Peter has found financial help in the form of such scholarships as the PUC opportunity grant. Without these scholarships, he says, “aviation would certainly have been ruled out.”

But it’s the aviation program itself that makes Peter’s eyes shine. “The discipline in PUC’s aviation program is higher here than at other colleges,” says Peter. It’s a long road after licensing to becoming a bush pilot—the most difficult flying in the world—but Peter has charted his future, confident in his skills and the scholarship support that keeps him on course.

DUSTIN COMM

Film & TV Production, Theology

It was a leadership scholarship that helped convince Dustin that PUC was the place to be; but it was a simple notice on campus—a posting for a taskforce youth pastor in Placerville—that changed the direction of his life. Dustin was headed for dental school when he read the notice and realized that his lifework was in ministry rather than dentistry. He didn’t apply for the Placerville position, but he changed his major to a double theology and film and TV production major, and “leadership” has taken on a whole new dimension.

In September, Dustin introduced the biggest media event in recent campus memory: the PUC Radio podcast. By December the weekly podcast was being downloaded by about 1,000 listeners per show; in the next two months that number increased to about 1,200 per show. On a campus of 1,500 students, that’s a blockbuster.

The podcast, executed with a view to maintaining quality and the Christian standards of PUC, is lauded by the administration and general listeners. Dustin’s vision is to create a forum for discussion and information that harnesses the new interest among students in creating an even more vibrant campus.

When the podcast was launched, Dustin held seven podcast jobs, serving as assistant campus chaplain in addition to fulltime study. Now, with a staff of 30 volunteers, he’s been able to step back a little and do what good leaders do: ensure that the people they work with can do the job without them.

“The leadership scholarship makes me want to live up to that scholarship as much as I can, not just take it for granted and mess around,” Dustin says. “I’m really proud of delegating and stepping back a bit on podcast control. They [the staff] are the ones who are going to carry this thing forward.”

The current and past PUC Radio podcasts can be heard at www.pucradio.com

KATIE CRAIG

Liberal Studies, Education

If busy people get more done, that could be the key to Katie Craig’s phenomenal productivity. She’s held a lot of jobs while a student at PUC, but none has been more demanding than that of her Campus Ministries position as World Missions Director.

It’s Katie’s pleasure to maintain contact with student missionaries (SMs) from PUC, organize care package and encouragement note parties, and recruit and interview future SMs and make sure they’re ready for whatever comes their way overseas. At present, she’s working with her friend, fellow liberal studies student Tiffany Anders, on the details of a new SM post that’s recently been approved by the General Conference—Camp Micronesia, a traveling summer camp program that will cover seven islands in the Guam–Micronesia conference, where Katie and Tiffany spent a year as SMs.

Though being World Missions Director is a big job, it’s not the only one Katie is holding down this year. She also works in Enrollment Services and the religion department, where last year she was named “Employee of the Year.” Though working 20 hours a week plus taking 18 credits and extra hours of required labs this quarter, Katie still cannot work enough to finance her studies at PUC. But she’s grateful that her loans will not be higher than they are—thanks to the scholarships she’s been given.

“The scholarships definitely help to lighten the load of loans,” says Katie, who looks forward to being an educator and doesn’t expect to have much spare income to repay loans. Among the scholarships Katie has been awarded are the Edmund C. Jaeger Scholarship, World Missions Scholarship, and PUC academic and leadership scholarships. “I know I’ve benefited a lot from scholarships. It makes us feel good that what we do is rewarded and that our loan burden can be lighter if we work hard.”

KAREN ONG

Chemistry

Senior chemistry major Karen Ong has proven herself an excellent student, a quality worker, and one who possesses a spirit of service—which is why she received the Richard A. Jackson Memorial Award from the chemistry department this year.

The award was established in memory of Richard Jackson, a PUC student who worked as a lab instructor in the chemistry department and exhibited a spirit of service and generosity. “With Rick it was all about everybody else,” says chemistry department chair William Hemmerlin. “If anybody needed help, Rick was right there.”

When Jackson passed away the year after his 1983 graduation, his family set up a memorial scholarship to help chemistry students who share Jackson’s attribute of willing, helpful service.

Ong came to PUC from Orlando, Florida. “I’m a long way from home, but when I came and visited PUC, I fell in love,” she explains. So she finds it rewarding to have her hard work acknowledged. “I was, quite frankly, surprised to receive the award!” Ong says. “It’s nice to know that I’m a valued part of the department.” Her work in the chemistry department includes web application projects, tutoring and grading papers.

Ong is also in the process of applying to graduate schools. “I’d like to combine my knowledge of science and medicine to do humanitarian work,” she explains. The award also has a practical value in this process: “It looks good on my résumé!” Ong says.

But most of all, Ong values the award because of her appreciation for the chemistry department. ” The support that she has felt for her work and future gives Ong a sense of belonging, despite the miles between PUC and Ong’s Florida home. “The best part of working and studying with the department,” she says, “is that it’s basically one big family.”

JOSE TORRES

Theology

Jose Torres is busy every Tuesday evening. In fact, for the past three years, Jose has been impossible to get ahold of during that time of the week. No, he’s not sitting at some isolated desk in the library, hidden from Angwin’s spotty cell-phone service. He’s not even gulping down a quick dinner of PUC’s finest meatless loaf. No, Jose spends every Tuesday evening behind a pulpit, sharing the word of God with residents at the Silverado Orchards retirement home in St. Helena.

The difference between Jose and your “typical” theology student isn’t vividly apparent at first glance. His welcoming smile and legitimate piano skills do nothing to reveal the fact that he’s a former Marine. If you don’t take the time to get to know Jose, you probably would never know that PUC is the first Christian—let alone Adventist—school that he has ever attended. What you would notice, however, and what is abundantly clear to even a casual acquaintance, is that Jose is truly a servant of Christ.

Jose is involved in several school ministries and has taken an active leadership role in both homeless ministries and prison ministries. Jose sees his current involvement in some of PUC’s outreach programs as a small way to thank Jesus for quenching his thirst and feeding his hunger. Somehow, between the demanding grind of class work and a job in student collections, he finds the time and energy to take on a powerful ministry of his own.

Jose is a recipient of the Earnest and Alma Zinke Scholarship, a grant made on a matching basis to students who are studying toward ministerial or teaching careers. To put it simply, Jose sees the scholarship as a “gift from God.” More than just a monetary asset, the scholarship has been to Jose an indication of God’s involvement in his education. “It’s like seeing the fingertips of God.”

Greg Schneider Becomes an Utt Professor

For college teachers who have to fit their research endeavors around a busy teaching schedule, an endowed research professorship is a priceless opportunity. This year one of our own professors, Greg Schneider, professor of behavioral science, has been given such an opportunity by the Walter C. Utt Endowment. Even now he is engrossed in researching and writing on the history of Methodism and its influence on politics and family, following the research he presented in his 1993 book, The Way of the Cross Leads Home.

This year, Schneider became the first PUC professor to receive the endowed professorship, which was established to honor the memory of influential and beloved history professor Walter C. Utt. The professorship is allowing Schneider to pursue in-depth research. "I wanted to develop a topic that had been latent in my research and earlier book: the rise of evangelical political activity and influence," Schneider explains. "If it weren't for the Utt Chair, this project would be dead in the water."

Schneider will present his research during Homecoming Weekend in a Walter C. Utt Memorial Lecture, titled "The Holy Family and the Fate of the Nation."

Schneider, the first Utt scholar from PUC, has been teaching at the college since 1977.

A New Website for Alumni and Friends

Hundreds of excellent, fascinating and talented students have marched in PUC graduations; these individuals now make up our vast network of alumni, and PUC's most impressive fan club. The college wants to make sure that these people have means to keep in touch with each other and with the campus—which is why the Alumni Association is launching a completely new website geared toward increasing connections. The goal is to create an online community of alumni with a website that is dynamic, interactive and full of stories, news and information. Watch for the new website, which will entirely replace the Alumni Association's old page on the PUC website, coming this spring.

Connecting at the Renovated Campus Ministries Center

There's a campaign underway in the Campus Ministries Center—a connection campaign. New campus chaplain Roy Ice, assistant chaplains Dustin Comm and Christy Ward, and the world missions and campus ministries leaders have been working energetically to connect personally with students and to be actively involved in campus life. They recently decided that their ministry would be more effective if their office were a welcoming, happening place.

"Before this year," explains Comm, "a lot of students didn't even know where the Campus Ministries Center was. Now we want it to be a place where the students feel like they can come and hang out."

So over Thanksgiving break, Ice and Comm went to work on some interior renovations. They celebrated their new look with an open house—and so many people came that there was a line waiting to get in! "Some of these things may seem superficial," Comm says, "but it's all part of the campaign to be more connected." Comm adds that the overall number of people coming into the office for questions or meetings has increased as well. Plus, he says, "Half the people that come in now come in to say 'hi' or hang out." And that's exactly the atmosphere the Campus Ministries Center was hoping for.

Up-and-Coming Teachers

Every year PUC invites potential employers from the world of K-12 education in the Pacific Union Conference, Oregon and Washington to visit the campus for two days. "Education Days" gives these representatives a chance to mingle with seniors who are looking to become professional educators—an arrangement which often proves to be mutually beneficial to the visiting administrators and the education students.

A banquet in the Dining Commons kicked off the event this year, with each senior education major taking a moment to introduce themselves formally and share a little bit about their background, experience and goals. The following morning found a more formal interview setting in the Fireside Room, where students had the chance to talk more in-depth with representatives from areas that interested them.

Marvin Mitchell, chair of the PUC education department, explains that this event is all about connections. "By the close of the education day program, few students will have signed contracts," he says, "but the vast majority of PUC students who choose to work within the Pacific Union will have the opportunity to do so, with the education day program playing a significant role."

Senior education majors look forward to taking responsibility for their own classrooms.

Nobel Prize Recipient Visits PUC

Brenner provides insights on genetics and Nobel Prizes.

"People say the Nobel Prize is the stamp of achievement in the science world," said Sydney Brenner. "But I don't think it's the prize that really counts; it's what we do in our scientific lives."

Brenner's lecture on How to Win a Nobel Prize was the 8th presentation in PUC's Breakthroughs in Science lecture series, established in 1997 and coordinated by the biology department. The series is underwritten by John G. Jacobson, M.D., a 1967 chemistry alumnus of PUC.

Brenner, age 75, won the Nobel Prize in 2002 for his work on genetic regulation of organ development and programmed cell death, and he has a long history of highly influential research, including pioneer work in genetics and molecular biology and discoveries that have been significant for medical research.

In a lecture that included scientific commentary but was also peppered with humorous anecdotes and illustrations to keep the broad range of attendees engaged, Brenner challenged the many students, faculty, staff and community members to be realistic, practical and to ask great questions. He explained that finding relevant scientific answers depends on identifying the problems that are within the reach of this generation, asking the great questions, placing proper value on knowledge, and putting in lots of hard work.

Terry Trivett, chair of the PUC biology department and coordinator of the Breakthroughs in Science series, is grateful for the insights Brenner and other eminent scientists have brought to the campus. "The value of the series is in being able to listen to the scientists themselves, not as reported by someone else," he explained. "We have found a fresh vigor in hearing a scientist present a great idea or problem that is relentlessly pursued."

Lecture Hall Honors Vernon Nye

Artist and PUC professor emeritus Vernon Nye celebrated his 90th birthday this December with a merry gathering of family, friends, and former students in Fresno, Calif. PUC President Richard Osborn attended the festivities to honor this art giant with a special tribute: the dedication of the classroom in the Rasmussen Art Gallery as the "Vernon Nye Lecture Hall." Osborn also read a letter on behalf of PUC Vice President for Student Services Lisa Bissell Paulson, in which she said: "Your life has been a gift to us all. Your beautiful and astonishing pieces have graced our homes, our calendars, our mantels...and most importantly, our lives."

The honor is certainly well placed. There wasn't much in the way of an art department at PUC before Nye. "When I got to PUC," he recollected, "I was taken to the basement of West Hall and shown a room with a large table. In the room were some old, dusty, dilapidated drawing easels." Nye was chairman of the art department from 1955 to 1976, and by the time he left, the art department was well established in Fisher Hall with a commercial art studio serving as the base for The California Art Service, and the Albion Summer School of Art offering annual summer classes.

Nye's other work in the art world included illustrating books at the Review and Herald; doing poster and illustration work for several U.S. government departments; leading classes and art tours across the U.S. and around the world; and teaching at Walla Walla College. His artwork, which he continues to create from his home in Fresno, has also been exhibited and awarded in national exhibitions across U.S., and he is an elected member of the American Watercolor Society.

class notes

COMPILED BY HERB FORD

1930

Thomas S. Geraty, '37, now in his 92nd year of life, has had a long and distinguished career in Seventh-day Adventist education. He returned to the PUC campus recently to pay homage in a memorial service to former PUC business manager George T. Gott, who died in December of 2005. Geraty was president of Middle East College in Beirut, Lebanon, in the 1950s when Gott served as business manager of that institution. Dr. Geraty now makes his retirement home in Riverside, Calif., near his son, Lawrence T. Geraty, '62, who is president of La Sierra University.

1950

Jack E. Bynum, '55, retired after a fruitful career in education as a professor of sociology at Southern Oregon University. He now calls Ashland, Ore., his home. Jack is a circuit-riding minister whose church speaking appointments are scheduled by the Oregon Conference. During student days at PUC, Jack was one of a group of students who regularly participated in preaching excursions to small Adventist churches in Northern California. "It's been 52 years since then, and I'm still preaching," Jack explains.

Michael G. Nabti, '58, has had a distinguished career as a professor at Stanford University's Hoover Institution. Michael recently found himself on the PUC campus to participate in a memorial service for George T. Gott, who died in late 2005. Dr. Nabti, a native of Lebanon, had been closely associated with Dr. Gott, then business manager of Middle East College in Beirut. Nabti earned his master's degree at PUC after receiving his bachelor's at Middle East College. In an interview Michael said he still recalls his 12-to-14-hour workdays as a student at PUC to pay for college expenses. "Great days they were," he said. He earned a second master's and a Ph.D. degree at Stanford.

Jon Dybdahl, '65, current president of Walla Walla College, Wash., has announced that he will retire in August of this year. At WWC for 17 years, Dybdahl will continue to live in College Place, but will work part-time at the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in Berrien Springs, Mich. "My wife, Kathy, and I have decided it is time to refocus our energies on family, scholarship, and other interests," Jon said in a written statement. (Jon's wife Kathy (Trefz), '65, is also a PUC graduate).

Ronald Stretter, '68, is now serving as administrator of the Napa Valley Adventist Retirement Estates in Yountville, Calif. Ron, who also serves as president of the PUC Alumni Association, has held the position of youth director of the Northern California Conference of Seventh-day Adventists for the past 12 years. One of the newest residents of the Estates after Ron assumed his new responsibilities was Howard O. Hardcastle, '62, who was PUC's registrar through most of the 1970s and during the 1992-93 school year.

1970

James E. Pedersen, '74, who had been serving as executive secretary of the Northern California Conference of Adventists, was named president of the conference in December 2005. In addition to his new leadership role for the more than 130 churches of the conference, Pedersen will serve on the PUC Board of Trustees. With his wife, Deborah (Rose), att. '74, Pedersen has also served in as the pastor at the Napa, Eagle Rock, Oxnard, Glendale and Temple City Adventist churches.

Walter D. Hofmann Jr., '79, founder and former editor of the Mammoth Times newspaper in Mammoth Lakes, Calif., has spent much of his time in the past year fundraising and doing hands-on relief work for the victims of the 2004 Southeast Asia tsunami. In January 2005 Wally traveled to Banda Aceh, Indonesia, to work in clean-up and restoration. He returned to Indonesia in September 2005 to oversee construction of a Women's & Children's Center. After completion of studies in construction technology at Shasta College in Redding, Calif., Wally expects to join his son, Matthew, in full-time construction of custom resort homes in the Mammoth area.

Candace Horsley, '77, is now serving as city manager of Ukiah, California. Candy recently found that her job also entailed serving as "disaster relief director" when her Northern California city suffered from major flood damage earlier this year.

1980

Malcolm Anderson, '82, who is the organist and keyboardist for the First Congregational Church in Anoka, Minn., returned to campus in late January to perform as one of the ten organists in PUC's Rieger Organ Concert Series. Malcolm also presented a concert of "Music for the Organ that Swings" in St. Helena's Grace Episcopal Church, sponsored by the Redwood Empire Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. In addition to his church organ service in Minnesota, Malcolm is a music teacher and also the keyboardist in the saxophone keyboard duo "Coda," which performs music for the community and corporate events throughout the Twin Cities area of Minnesota.

Yvonne J. (Hendley) Hanson, '69, '82, who makes her home in Southern California, marked the start of 2006 by initiating The Mildred Hendley and Clara Hanson Endowed Scholarship Fund at PUC. The fund, which honors the mothers of both Yvonne and her husband, Lloyd, will provide support to qualified female students studying in the PUC department of communication.

Pat Wick, '84, now lives in the tiny town of Ramona, Kan., which she writes about in her newly published book "It's Another Day in the Country." The coffee-table book tells the story of small-town life in Ramona (pop. 100) and is filled with photographs of a simple, quieter existence in the country. She also runs a B&B called Cousin's Corner, teaches art, writes a newspaper column, and runs a gift shop, all while wearing the hat of mayor. To see more about her life in Ramona, visit her website at: californiasisters.com.

1990

Dan Thesman, Att. '96-'99, and his wife, Louise, live in College Place, Wash., where Dan is station manager for Blue Mountain Television. Previously he worked as a production manager for an award-winning communications company in Southern California and served for five years as a news producer for an ABC affiliate in Bakersfield, Calif.

Michelle (Konn) Rai, '97, recently PUC's director of Public Relations, has joined the faculty of the PUC department of communication, and finds herself having "a great time" teaching students in three sections of general education speech communication classes. Writes Michelle, "Most of my students are freshmen and have so much energy—they definitely keep me on my toes." Michelle is still a student herself as she works on a master's in integrated marketing communication. She's looking forward to completing it by the end of this year "so I can assume a bit of normalcy in my life!"

Richard Woo Lee and Amy Hassard, both '98, had two celebrations on the day they graduated in 1998 – they received their PUC diplomas, and they were also married. On December of 2005 they, along with their daughters, Celeste and Christine, celebrated Richard's ordination as a minister of the gospel. Since his return from studies leading to a master of divinity degree at Andrews University (Mich.) in 2000, Richard has been serving in ministry at the Cerritos Korean Seventh-day Adventist Church in Southern California.

Maria "Lucy" (Zavala) Popson, '92, '94, has been named Arizona's "Teacher of the Year" by the Arizona Educational Foundation, according to a major story about her in the Tucson (Ariz.) Citizen newspaper. The award, conferred on Lucy in November of 2005, carries with it a prize of $20,000, a laptop computer, a full scholarship to Argosy University and a SMARTboard, an interactive, computerized whiteboard (once called a "blackboard"). Now in her 11th year of teaching students in the third grade at the Walter Douglas Elementary School in Tucson, Lucy will work toward her Ph.D. in education at the university's Phoenix campus. Part of the recommendation for consideration of the award from Lucy's school district says, "The heat isn't set any higher in Lucy Popson's third-grade classroom at Walter Douglas Elementary, but when you walk into her room you immediately feel the warmth between the kids and the teacher."

Paul Savino, Att. '95, found that the "Camp Safari" he created at the Palm Desert Oasis (Calif.) Seventh-day Adventist Church last summer was a hit with both parents and children in the desert community his church serves. The Safari included supervised visits for community children to the local zoo, museums, and a water park, in addition to crafts, drama, cooking and other classes conducted in the church.

Judith (Andersen) Pizarro, '97, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of California, Irvine, co-authored a study on postwar disorders among 15,027 Civil War veterans. It was published in the Archives of General Psychiatry and carried to other readers internationally by Reuters, a British news agency. Dr. Roger Pitman of Harvard Medical School, editorializing on Pizarro's study, said her findings "strikingly echo the results of research into the mental health status of Vietnam veterans." Judith's husband, David Pizarro, '97, is now an assistant professor at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York. He earned his Ph.D. degree at Yale University.

Teacher Julie (Hua) Kohltfarber, '96, and Principal Allen Lipps, '91, of the Mauna Loa Adventist School in Hilo, Hawaii, have, with 35 of their students and fellow staffers, completed a unique environmental project on the Big Island's huge Umikoa Ranch. The project will afford protection and growth for Hawaiian Nene geese, the state bird, which is currently on the endangered species list. With the aid of former state senator David Matsuura, those from the school designed and planted a two-acre area with plants that will ensure the protection of young geese, access to plants that can be used for food, and optimal mating conditions. Matsuura said a sign will go up at the site crediting the school for designing and building it.

2000

(NICC). The organization, which operates as "Faith & Values Media," is the nation's largest coalition of Jewish and Christian faith groups dedicated to media production, distribution and promotion. Together these faith groups have more than 200,000 congregations with 120 million congregants.

A WHITE DRESS | Richard C. Osborn

Back in the 1980s, when I was serving as Takoma Academy's principal, a parent approached me a few months before graduation. She told me about one of her daughter's classmates, a girl attending our school whose mother, a single parent, worked in a county library.

The mother received no alimony or child support, yet she was determined that her three children receive an Adventist education. So each child worked on our custodial crew to make this happen. In addition, the school gave them scholarship awards to supplement their earnings. In time, the girl became so responsible that when her supervisor was gone she could oversee the custodial needs of our entire school.

In consideration of these serious financial needs, the parent relaying the story to me proposed what I thought an odd and possibly unnecessary expense. Would I accept an anonymous gift to the school to buy a white dress for the girl? Reflecting an older culture, she said, "No girl should graduate from high school without a white dress, and I know she doesn't have the money to buy one. But I don't want her or my daughter to know who gave the gift."

What I didn't immediately understand was the symbolic importance of a new dress. The monetary value of the dress was insignificant. What mattered was the self-worth and encouragement the gift would bestow to the young girl.

We made the arrangements with our female vice principal to help the student purchase a dress and matching shoes. On commencement day, we all watched excitedly as the girl marched proudly in her white dress. Most thrilled was the parent who had made the dream possible by offering a simple gift.

What are the white dresses of Pacific Union College that our alumni and friends make possible today?

At PUC we're given gifts targeted to specific needs which are major—renovating the residence halls, building a fund for a larger and renovated library, funding equipment needs for a department, helping pay for faculty development, creating endowments for specific purposes, building a prayer chapel and garden, restoring an old building for a significant purpose, sponsoring a lecture series, or paying for athletic uniforms. I don't want to minimize these contributions, because they are vitally important. We want to make sure that as donors you get fulfillment in watching your prayerful investments to PUC grow.

But the white dresses for today's students are undesignated gifts to be used for the greatest need—scholarships to help them attend college.

We received great news in Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger's budget that Cal Grant, a program to help students with special economic needs, has been restored to original levels in next year's budgets. This news was offset at the same time by bad news from Washington, D.C., that reductions in the federal budget will make it even harder for similar students to receive reasonable loans and funds to attend college. This means PUC increasingly has to fund student scholarships from our own operations, a trend that will continue at all American colleges at a greater pace than in the past. Your investments to PUC are helping us make up the difference.

We thank you for the many "white dresses" you help provide our students through so much giving.
