A Legacy of Nursing Service

By Pam Bobst

Less than a month after marrying her high-school sweetheart, Milton Lee, on August 4, 1936, Helen Warren Lee was sailing from San Francisco (with Milton) to Shanghai, China. They were headed back to the country where they had met.

Born in China to the first missionaries sent overseas from PUC, Helen followed in her parents' footsteps to PUC, graduating in 1936 from nursing. Afterward, while classmates were "boning up" for the State Board examination, Helen, by special request of a surgeon, was caring for one of his patients. She tried to study at night, but felt unprepared by the time of the exam. Still, when the class went to San Francisco to take the exams, they all passed and Helen received a high score.

As a 22-year-old newly graduated nurse, Helen arrived in China with Milton in mid-October. She opened a nurse-operated medical clinic in Mokiang, which was ten days' travel from the nearest hospital or doctor, with no running water, electricity or phones. U.S. mail took six weeks to arrive. With limited supplies provided by the Shanghai Clinic, her hydrotherapy training, and her fluency in Chinese, Helen tackled the challenge. She had been told that she would have plenty of teeth to pull, and so obtained ancient forceps from the "Thieves Market" in Hong Kong.

Her experiences in Mokiang were many and varied. She learned how to instruct patients in taking medicine in ways that respected their culture and superstitions. She delivered many babies, treated opium poisoning, tuberculosis, malnourished children, pneumonia, and yes, pulled teeth. She taught healthy living practices, trained others in artificial respiration, and administered their small supply of smallpox vaccinations. Helen always carried her medical kit, and on one occasion, with assistance, she splintered the broken leg of a mule. Eventually, Helen had the assistance of Chinese trained nurses, which was a great help.

By the time she and Milton left the Mokiang area for furlough (after over six years), the district had a much-respected nurse-operated clinic, a thriving church school and seven churches. In 2006, at the age of 92, Helen and her daughter returned to this area of China and worked with a medical group that held a day-long clinic at the Adventist church. Helen gladly translated for the doctors.

Helen and Milton spent 47 years of mission service in China. Helen actively supported her husband's evangelistic meetings and presented health messages. During retirement, Helen undertook the daunting task of translating the scriptures into scripts that would allow The Bible in Living Sound to be available in Chinese. Professional voices were hired to record the scripts and the finished product is in great demand today.

Helen is the last remaining member of the nursing class of 1936. The family legacy in health care continues with Helen's daughter Sylvia Lee Fillman, who graduated from PUC's nursing program in 1963; her daughter-in-law Aura Lindgren Lee, who graduated in 1964; and her grand-nephew Derek Bobst, who is currently a nursing student. Helen now lives in the Napa Valley at the Adventist Retirement Estates in Yountville.

Documentary Features Nursing Students

By Kelly McHann

Journey of Healers won Best Documentary at the 2007 Sonscreen Film Festival. Written and directed by T.J. Gleason, a PUC student majoring in film and television production, the film captures the passion and persistence of nursing students as they work to reach their goals. T.J., who worked at the front desk in the nursing department for three years, offers a compassionate window into the lives of these students as they endure tough work schedules, difficult patients, sleep deprivation, single parenting and learning among new languages and cultures. Journey of Healers follows the challenges and achievements of six students in their journey to become nurses. Through it all, we share in their enthusiasm, determination and faith. Blessed Gwebu, a nursing student who features in the film, wrote and performed the music. The cast of PUC students also includes James Crays, Lidia Dima, Caroline Dos Santos, David Koenig, and Jennie Oldenkamp. PUC alumna and faculty member Jeni Guth is also featured. The inspirational story encourages all of us to persevere through our struggles to ultimate triumph. If you are interested in more details or ordering Journey of Healers visit www.tjgleason.com.

Faculty Changes

By Nancy Tucker

The nursing department says goodbye to pediatric instructor Jeni Guth this year as she moves forward in her professional education, and to BSN coordinator, Carol Williams, as she semi-retires into a part-time position at Memorial Hospital in Santa Rosa.

We welcome two new instructors to the ADN program.

Gladys Muir comes to us from a midwifery practice in Apple Valley, Calif. She graduated from PUC with nursing and education in 1983, and completed her midwifery at Baylor College of Medicine in Texas and her MSN from Samuel Merritt College in Oakland. She also has an MA in counseling and guidance from Loma Linda University. She contributes great maternal-newborn expertise and bilingual skills to the program. Before moving to Apple Valley, Gladys spent 10 years at the Guam Adventist Clinic and has volunteered in Uzbekistan, Ethiopia and Paraguay.

Bonnie Kugel Ramos is also a PUC graduate of nursing and German in the class of 1977, with a BSN from Andrews University, an MS in psychiatric nursing from Loma Linda University and an FNP from Oregon Health Sciences University. She has taught for PUC at the Glendale and White Memorial campuses, for Atlantic Union College, Riverside Community College and Oregon Health Sciences University. She also brings a variety of clinical practice including family practice, the U.S. Army, Yellowhawk Tribal Health, correctional facilities and mental health hospitals.

Nursing Students and Missions

By Gladys Muir

Jessica Bowen and Julie Meyer, recent nursing graduates of Pacific Union College, have recently put their nursing skills to the test in the Philippines, Kenya, and Nigeria.

Jessica Bowen, currently completing her BSN at PUC, spent four weeks on the island of Puerto Princesa in the Philippines during the summer of her associate degree program. She preached 18 sermons in 14 days to an average of 45 people, despite wind and rain. On the trip, Jessica says she learned that as a Christian and a student nurse, she had a great capacity to love and serve people she had never known or seen. "This is what it means to be a Christian nurse and follower of Christ — to help others in need, whether physically or spiritually. Jessica also spent about a month in Kenya preaching to people on the streets. "It was worth it to preach the love and hope of Christ's message, even in the middle of a dark cow field at night," states Jessica.

Before completing an AS degree in December 2007, Julie Meyer spent last summer at the Ile-Ife Adventist Hospital in Ile-Ife, Nigeria. Shocked by how primitive the hospital was, even though it is the "best" Adventist hospital in Nigeria, Julie says, "What surprised me the most was how one nurse was assigned to up to 24 patients at a time with no nursing assistants to help." It sounded impossible at first, but eventually, Julie discovered it was doable. Through all the challenges, feelings of inadequacy and even concerns of returning with AIDS, Hepatitis or Tuberculosis, Julie rediscovered her desire to offer her skills and knowledge to help those in need. "My Nigerian summer really gave me a passion and love for the nursing profession because I really felt like I was making a difference despite my inexperience. ... I am still amazed at how spiritual and committed the people of Nigeria are to their faith. I really felt like my relationship with God was alive there and that I was beginning to understand what real faith was all about."

Welcome to "Real" Nursing

By Brindusa Radoias

After completing an AS degree in nursing at PUC, many graduates continue on in the BSN program. This is an entirely different ballgame, and as "real" nurses, the students have a lot more responsibilities. Levi Gore, one of this year's BSN students, likens the experience to "being run over by a Mack truck." But he takes comfort in the camaraderie that exists among nurses: "I am always thankful for my co-workers who are always willing to give help, advice and encouragement." This sentiment seems to resonate with many of the students. Zeta Gore says, "I am so thankful for merciful, patient, experienced nurses that are willing to nurture new grads. ... Practicing the art of nursing can be daunting for a new RN, but I've found comfort in knowing I am never alone on the floor." Our new nurses receive assistance on a daily basis from their co-workers; however, many are also eager to ask for and receive divine assistance. Jessica Bowen tells of an experience she had with a patient after praying for guidance during her shift. "A still, small voice told me to check the patient. Not two seconds later ... I found her hemorrhaging. I was able to stop the bleeding and call for help. This was no accident. The Lord is always there helping," she says. To others, God manifests Himself through more subtle means, showing love and encouragement when they need a morale boost. Rochelle Dunn tells about a time at work when she "just didn't seem to do anything right." She prayed for peace and that night, an eight-month old patient acted as the vessel for God's message. "He reached up with his tiny hands, pulling my finger down, and gave me a kiss." Other BSN student testimonials are all in the vein of thankfulness for different blessings. Please keep them in your prayers as they continue on this special journey of healing.
