Job Summary

The Business Administration faculty member teaches Accounting courses, supports student engagement, and provides academic advising. This role includes contributing to departmental activities, participating in shared governance, and fostering a student-centered, close-knit academic community while maintaining positive community relationships.

Desirable Qualifications

Teaching experience is strongly preferred, particularly in-person instruction at the undergraduate or graduate level.

Experience with online education will also reflect positively.

Candidates must demonstrate the ability to engage positively and collaboratively with students and colleagues in support of the Pacific Union College mission.

In lieu of a terminal degree in Accounting, candidates with a Master's degree in Business Administration or Accounting combined with active professional certification or licensure or significant relevant professional experience will also be considered.

Ability to integrate practical experience in engaging, student-centered instruction is highly valued.

Essential Functions

Teaches undergraduate Accounting courses, including financial and managerial accounting and other accounting courses consistent with the candidate's expertise and departmental needs.

Assesses specific course requirements, qualifications and interests, as well as the evolving needs of the department.

Promotes Pacific Union College's strong emphasis on meaningful student engagement and active participation in campus life.

Provides academic advising for departmental majors.

Attends and contributes to departmental activities.

Participates in the College's shared governance process.

Engages positively with the surrounding community.

Promotes student-centered culture and faculty who contribute to a close-knit academic community.
