Student Learning Outcomes

Students can:

- Express a critical understanding of the role of a free press in a democratic society, apply the principles and laws of free speech, identify key historical events in the history of journalism, and identify media trends.
- Gather and analyze relevant data, identify and interview sources, evaluate information, and write clear, graceful, and grammatical news stories that incorporate a variety of words and images.
- Create principled content and make ethical choices in the development, production, funding, and promotion of media messages.
- Practice basic journalistic principles such as truthfulness, accuracy, objectivity, fairness, and public accountability in the acquisition and delivery of newsworthy information.

Occupational Information

What can I do with this major?

Journalistic writing skills allow students to enter media outlets that specialize in news reporting, feature writing, editing and interviewing. In addition, writing and communication skills are rated as top skills all companies seek in their employees.

Additional Education Required?

The degree is an entry-level one that does not require additional education to be successful in the field. However, many graduates have entered graduate programs in pre-professional areas, business, and writing, depending on their career goals and interests.

Public Sector vs. Denominational

Opportunities are available in both the public sector and denominational employment. Students who possess keen communication, writing and editing skills are in high demand in nearly every industry.

Job Outlook

The outlook is excellent, as more mediums (broadcast, print, online, etc.) seek talented graduates. However, journalism is a competitive job market, and only those who have honed their skills through practice and discipline will find immediate jobs in the field upon graduation.
